Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The Smith-Rensburg Farmstead is an agricultural complex centered on a circa 1830 brick dwelling and bank barn. The house is a two-story five-bay Flemish bond brick masonry building, sitting on a stone foundation, and capped by a side gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The dwelling is two bays deep, and has a two-story two-bay brick ell on the northern end of the rear. The windows are 6/6 wood sash, with jack arch lintels. There is a one-story three-bay half-hipped roofed porch that is supported by turned wood posts, with scrolled brackets. There is a one-leaf wood paneled door with a four-light transom. The bank barn is a five-course American bond brick masonry building that sits on a stone foundation, and is capped by a side gable roof sheathed in sheets of corrugated metal. There are wheat sheath decorative patterns in the brick of the sides of the barn. The gable ends are clad with wood. On the banked side of the barn, there are very large sliding wood doors. Two silos are attached to the structure.

The Smith-Rensburg Farmstead was most recently surveyed in 1992. At that time it was determined that it was eligible for the National Register under Criterion C, architectural distinction. Both of the principal structures at the Smith-Rensburg Farmstead possess a high degree of integrity. They seem to have been little changed since 1992 and, in fact, since the time of their construction. The setting and character of the site remain little changed. There is no known association of the Smith-Rensburg Farmstead with events or individuals, thus disqualifying it for eligibility under Criteria A or B. Criterion D, information

Smith-Rensburg Farmstead; "Neighbors Content"
Middletown vicinity
Private

Ca. 1812-1925

The Smith-Rensburg Farmstead, or "Neighbors Content", as it was known until about 1920, contains a two-story brick dwelling with five bays and a bracketed one-story porch built about 1830, a stone and log springhouse with an inscribed 1812 datestone with the initials of Henry Smith, the owner of the farm from 1804 to 1824, a brick and frame bank barn of about 1825-1850 possibly built by a subsequent owner, Samuel Rensburg, and a frame wagon shed/corn crib of the late 19th century. The brick architecture of the house and the bank barn are good examples of their types and periods. The bank barn is one of two identified in the Middletown Valley, the other being the dated 1856 barn at Old Needwood (F-2-64). The Smith-Rensburg barn has wheat sheaf pattern vents in the end walls. The house plan is a simple central hall type with flanking parlors and a rear wing. Evidence on the brick exterior end wall of the wing indicates that a projecting bake oven was once present and removed in the early 20th century.

CONTRIBUTING RESOURCE COUNT: 5

The Smith-Remsburg Farmstead is an agricultural complex centered on a circa 1830 brick dwelling with a dated 1812 stone and log springhouse/summer kitchen, a brick and frame bank barn possibly built in the second quarter of the 19th century, a concrete block milk house of the first quarter of the 20th century, and a frame wagon shed/corn crib built during the last quarter of the 19th century. The farmstead is located on the west side of Marker Road about 1/4 mile north of the Bidle Road intersection near Middletown, Frederick County, Maryland. The dwelling is set back from Marker Road and faces east. The brick barn is prominently visible at the edge of Marker Road and the other outbuildings are arranged between the barn and the house, including several non-contributing modern agricultural outbuildings. Among these are a concrete block dairy barn and three silos.

The dwelling, which was dated by title research and the presence of the corbeled cornice and a Greek Revival mantel, has two sections, a two-story main section with five bays and a flemish bond east elevation and a two-story rear wing with a one-story shed addition covered with modern vinyl siding. The principal section has a center entrance with a four-light transom and a one-story frame porch with brackets and chamfered posts, probably an addition of the third quarter of the 19th century. The door is a three-paneled type with its upper panel glazed, probably replacement of the late 19th century. The windows are 6/6 with gauged flat arches and wood sills. Louvred shutters flank the windows. The cornice is corbeled brick, a feature of buildings erected between about 1820 and 1850. The roof is covered with composition material. Interior end chimneys rise at the north and south elevations. The north and south elevations and the rear wing are in 5:1 American bond and the west end of the rear wing shows a patched section where a projecting bake oven rear wall was removed. The north and south elevations each have two bays with two attic windows near the gable peaks. The attic windows are 2/2. On the south elevation of the rear wing is an open, two-story porch with square posts. The wing has four bays with alternating doors and windows. The wood lintels are plain. The interior of the house has a central stair hall flanked by two parlors. The mantels in each parlor have been replaced, the north parlor having a Greek Revival style mantel and the south parlor having a circa 1950 rebuilt mantel and surround. The south parlor has molded window and door surrounds with bull's eye corner blocks. The north parlor has a built-in cupboard flanking the mantel, and a modern bathroom partitioned off near the west side of the room. In the hall, the stair closers are scroll-sawn in a simple design. The rear wing has a dining room with a built-in cupboard and a molded chair rail. In the modern kitchen is a closed-off cooking fireplace and a winding stair to the second story. The frame shed addition to the wing contains a pantry. The second floor of the house has grained wood trim and 6-panel doors.

Springhouse: The springhouse has a stone lower level and a log upper section covered with german siding except in the north gable where beaded clapboards, probably the original siding, is intact. At the northwest corner of the stone section is a stone inscribed with a panel surrounding the initials "H S" flanking heart above the date 1812. The heart motif is repeated in the gable of the log section as a vent opening. "H S" is undoubtedly Henry Smith, who was the owner

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Smith-Rensburg Farmstead, known until the early 1920's as "Neighbors Content" after the original 180-acre tract surveyed for Andrew Smith in 1790, is a good example of the vernacular brick architecture of dwellings and bank barns in the first quarter of the 19th century, with a mostly unaltered plan featuring twin parlors flanking a central hall. The brick bank barn with decorative vents is one of two brick barns of the German type identified in the Middletown Valley. The other barn is a dated 1856 example at Old Needwood (F-2-64). The Smith-Rensburg barn may date from the second quarter of the 19th century. The elaborately carved datestone on the springhouse and the complexity of spaces and finishes in the log upper level suggests that it was the original dwelling of the farm, used until the brick house was finished. The son of Andrew Smith, Henry Smith, left his initials on the datestone. In 1831, the farm was sold to Samuel Rensburg, whose descendants owned the property until 1925, when it was passed to Martin S. Beachley, a nephew of the last Rensburg owner. Mrs. David Montgomery, one of the current owners, is a descendant of the Beachley family. Samuel Rensburg may be responsible for the building of the brick barn.

from about 1804 to 1824. The log section has two bays on the north with a four-panel door hung on strap hinges. The windows are 6/6 with molded frames. The gable roof is covered with corrugated metal. The interior of the log section has wide board floors, a molded chair rail, and plastered walls. A tongue-and-groove partition creates two rooms. The lower stone level has two rooms with a cooling trough running through both rooms from the spring just north of the foundation. The south room has a large cooking fireplace and the exterior stone and brick chimney is located on the south gable end. The finish and complexity of spaces in the springhouse suggests that it may have been the first dwelling structure in the farm, used while the brick house was being built.

Bank barn and milk house: The large brick and frame bank barn was probably built between 1825 and 1850. The brick end walls in 5:1 American bond have vents in the shape of wheat sheaves or hour glasses. On the north elevation are sliding tongue-and-groove doors, which replace the probable original swing doors. The roof is corrugated metal over wood shingles. Next to the ramp on the north side is the concrete base of a silo which has been removed. On the south elevation, the stall level is walled with brick. On the east end is a frame enclosure sided with german siding, the original milking room, an alteration of the first quarter of the 20th century. On the west end of the barn is a concrete block tractor shed, a later 20th century addition. The vertical sided forebay above the stall level has a loading door below a projecting dormer in the approximate center of the elevation. Adjacent to the east end of the barn and at the edge of Marker Road is a one-story concrete block milk house built in the first quarter of the 20th century. It has a standing seam metal roof and metal casement windows.

Wagon shed/corn crib: The frame wagon shed with corn cribs was built in the last quarter of the 19th century. It has vertical siding and sliding doors on the north elevation with a roof covered in both pressed metal and standing seam metal.
